Straight talk on the cost of visiting Europe this year

You've seen this headline in double page spreads in leading newspapers like The New York Times, Chicago Tribune, Boston Globe, Philadelphia Inquirer, Washington Post, Detroit News, and Los Angeles Times.

It's our way of helping move the "undecided" off the fence... and into your travel agency. Although trade reports indicate that this season is shaping up well, the European Travel Commission found in a special research study that much more business can be had. 48% of the people who have thought of going to Europe still have not made up their minds.

Mostly they were concerned with higher costs. So, instead of skirting the issue, we met it head on... in the headline. Then proceeded to give the facts on cost—and value!

- Flying to Europe this year is one of the best travel bargains going. As compared with 10 years ago the lowest individual trans-Atlantic fare is one-third less.

- Package tour programs using special fares offer great value. The people who put the programs together pass on to the public savings realized by volume purchases of hotel rooms, sightseeing and other items.

- A reassuring feature of buying a package tour is that many major costs are prepaid. The traveler knows in advance what is covered.

A European vacation, we tell the public, represents true value... an unforgettable experience which will never obsolesce. We drive home the point with examples (in dollars and cents) of attractions from all 23 ETC member countries. And we note, of course, that some of Europe's best shows—from changing the guard to folklore festivities to natural wonders—are free.

The appeal and variety of the tour programs of participating carriers is bound to move the fence-sitters into action. And with this bold headline, we send them to you:
